

Conference tackles issues

Staff Report

What works? What doesn't? How can we fix it?

Those three questions dominated the annual Army Family Action Plan conference at the Officers' Club March 29.

More than 75 people joined to let the Army leadership here know what issues are important to the Fort Jackson Army family.

"It's an issue resolution process," Tanya Brown, AFAP coordinator, said about the program. "It gives any member of the Army family (active duty Soldiers, Reserve Soldiers, National Guard Soldiers, family members, retirees, veterans and DoD civilians) a way to voice issues they believe are important to maintain a good standard of living."

Once an issue is submitted, along with a possible solution, it is given to the appropriate organization or directorate at Fort Jackson, which in turn researches the issue and whether the proposed solution is viable.

"There are a lot of issues that can easily be resolved here. It's just a matter of drawing attention to it," Brown said.

If an issue cannot be resolved at post level it is then addressed at the Training and Doctrine Command level, and potentially by the Department of the Army.

Brown said that there is not a resolution for every issue, but it is important to address those issues as well.

"With funds being really limited, a lot of things are not happening that used to be able to happen," she said. "Even if it's not the answer you want, sometimes you can settle because at least you have the information as to why something can't happen."

AFAP is not a one-time event, but rather an ongoing process.

"We are actually a demonstration site for customer service management," said Vincent Valenzuela, well-being coordinator. "We collect issues all year long and work those issues all year long."

Both Valenzuela and Brown stressed the importance of voicing an issue no matter how big or small.

"Those little things that can make life that much better is what we are trying to do," she said.

"They [members of the community] know this forum is important because their issue is going to get surfaced. It's not going to be ignored," he said.

Brown said 13 issues were raised at this year's conference:

- 1) Benefits for military technicians — Certain benefits are lost to Reserve Soldiers when they become dual status.
- 2) Use of alcohol and tobacco by Initial Entry Training

Fort Jackson 2007 NCO, Soldier of the Year named

Chris Rasmussen Leader Staff

A musician with the 282nd Army "Victory" Band and a chaplain's assistant were named Fort Jackson's 2007 Noncommissioned Officer and Soldier of the Year, respectively.

The announcement was made Wednesday following two days of competition between three NCOs and three Soldiers in several areas including the Army Physical Fitness Test, rifle marksmanship, appearance before a board, a 50-question exam, a written essay, Warrior Task testing as well as a day and night land navigation competition.

"I am shocked," said Sgt. Scott Boyle, 282nd Army Band, after hearing the news. "The competition was really close. I knew it was going to be neck and neck."

Spc. Brian Winters, a chaplain's assistant with 120th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) was named Soldier of the Year.

The pair will represent Fort Jackson during the U.S. Army Accessions Command NCO/Soldier of the Year Competition slated for May 15-18.

"I have a lot of hard work ahead of me to prepare for Accessions Command," Boyle said. "I plan to especially concentrate on day and land navigation, because that was the most challenging and frustrating part of this competition for me."

Boyle, 25, who has a Bachelor of Science in music education, said his long-term goal in the Army is to become a drill sergeant.

"I am looking forward to becoming a better Soldier so that when I become a drill sergeant I can help those Soldiers that follow me with boards and competitions," he said.

Winters, 36, who was assigned to the 94th Engineer Battalion (Combat), Germany, before coming to Fort Jackson said he is excited to continue in the competition.

Sgt. Boyle

Spc. Winters

"I am so pleased," he said. "I am going to start preparing for the Accessions Command competition on Monday."

While day and night land navigation was the most challenging aspect for Winters, he said he plans to concentrate on all aspects of the upcoming competition.

"This will be a stiffer competition because I will be going against the best from several installations," he said. "The

Ask the Garrison Commander

Youth summer program; Assignment code precedence

Q My school-age children will be on vacation for 11 weeks and I need care for my fourth and fifth graders. Where can I find information about what is being offered at Fort Jackson, eligibility requirements and when summer camp registration begins?

Col. Eddie Stephens Jr.

A School Age Services offers Camp Vision Quest (Kids Choice) located at building 5975 Chesnut Rd. Sign up began Monday. Children attending camp must first be registered with Child and Youth Services. Registration is handled at the Central Enrollment Office located at the Joe E. Mann Community Center, 3392 Magruder Ave., and on an appointment basis to reduce waiting times (walk-ins are taken on a space available basis).

Call 751-4865 for an appointment. Vision Quest hours of operation are from 5:15 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Q I have a stabilization Assignment Eligibility and Availability code of “5” which is for drill sergeant duties, and I have an approved high school senior stabilization AEA code of “Y.” Which AEA code takes precedence?

A The AEA codes are a management tool used to identify a Soldier’s eligibility and availability for reassignment. The codes are defined in detail in AR 614-200, paragraph 3-8.

Normally, when two or more AEA codes apply for stabilization, the AEA code with the longest period of stabilization will be reported. However, as a drill sergeant, AEA code “5” takes precedence over the high school senior stabilization.

Garrison Fact of the Week

Vision Quest is designed for youth that have completed Grades 1 through 5. Family members of active duty and retired military personnel, Reserve and National Guard on active duty, appropriated and non-appropriated civilian employees and employees of Department of Defense contractors are eligible to use the camp.

To submit questions for the “Ask the Garrison Commander”, call 751-2842, or e-mail nahrwolds@jackson.army.mil.

Fort Jackson talks back

If you witnessed a mother berating or spanking her child, would you consider it child abuse, and if so, what would you do?

Staff Sgt. David Morgan
Soldier Support Institute

“I would go speak to the parent. Then monitor the situation to make sure the child was all right.”

Staff Sgt. Chad Stafford
Student, Adjutant General School

“If it wasn’t severe and someone was just disciplining their child, then I would stay out of it, but you can tell the difference between child abuse and discipline.”

Stephanie Bodrick
DA Civilian

“I would observe the situation to determine if it is actually child abuse. If it is child abuse, then I would report it.”

Laurinda Penn
Volunteer

“It depends on how severe the spanking is, because sometimes it can be a tool of discipline.”

Staff Sgt. Reginald Coaxum
U.S. Army Recruiting Command

“I consider it child abuse if the child is in danger or if it may cause the child bodily harm. If it is child abuse, I would speak to the mother. I would not try to disrespect her authority as a mother, but I would explain to her that it is something that would affect the child negatively.”

Robin Gordon
DA Civilian

“I would definitely approach the mother and inform her that there is a better way of handling the situation. Because there are so many children who die every day in America because of abuse, I feel that it should be reported to the police or Social Services.”

Army to field improved body armor

Debi Dawson
Army News Service

FORT BELVOIR, Va. — The Army continues to upgrade body armor to increase protection from bullets and fragments, and soon will field the Improved Outer Tactical Vest to Soldiers deploying to Iraq and Afghanistan.

The IOTV meets Program Executive Office Soldier's goals of providing Soldiers with the most advanced protective gear available while also improving comfort and mission effectiveness.

"The IOTV is more than three pounds lighter than the current OTV, but provides an equal level of protection over an increased area," said Brig. Gen. R. Mark Brown, Program Executive Officer Soldier. "This vest epitomizes our continuous efforts to seek the next improvement and to provide our Soldiers the best body armor available, bar none. It is live-fire tested — we know it will prove itself in combat."

"The weight of the IOTV was reduced by eliminating overlap," said Major Carl Fulmore, assistant product manager for Soldier Survivability. "With the IOTV, we were able to streamline previous improvements."

For example, the vest now has a higher cut in the underarm area, which will eliminate the need to attach the axillary or underarm protector to the current deltoid axillary protector set. The deltoid protector can still be attached at the commander's discretion. The vest's integrated throat protector provides the same protection as the current attachable version, but it's designed to be more comfortable. The now integrated side plate carriers decrease the vest's profile, and a lower back protector extends the vest's coverage by 52 square inches.

The IOTV's numerous improvements go beyond increased protection. A single-stage quick release added to the front of the vest allows a Soldier to doff the IOTV and its attachments with one pull. The vest then falls to the ground in two pieces and can be put back together in minutes.

"This feature would only be used by Soldiers in emergency situations, such as being trapped in an overturned or submerged vehicle. It's not meant to simply be a quick way to get out of the IOTV at the end of the day or mission," Fulmore said.

Medics could use the quick release to treat wounded Soldiers, or they could use an opening on the left shoulder, which allows easy access while still providing protection to the patient.

Comfort and utility features are also part of the improved design. The most notable may be the IOTV's overhead opening. An internal waistband provides a snug fit and moves much of the weight from the shoulders to the waist.

"This design significantly decreased the vest's profile and should increase mobility. We believe mobility equals survivability," Fulmore said.

Other features include:

- The addition of a long variant to sizes medium through extra large. This extends the size range from eight to 11 and should result in a near-custom fit for Soldiers.

- Additional modular lightweight load-carrying equipment attachments as a result of moving the opening from the front of the vest. These attachments are now in the universal camouflage pattern.

- Enhanced small arms ballistic insert pockets with four inches of vertical adjustability, which will allow for better placement of the plates based on individual body proportions.

- Additional storage pockets.
- A mesh lining to aid ventilation.
- Vertical adjustability of side plate carriers.

Soldiers will continue to use the enhanced small arms protective inserts and the enhanced side ballistic inserts.

The IOTV is a result of research and development that began with a body armor industry day in the spring of 2006. Seventeen vendors came forward with designs for improved body armor, and six were selected to provide prototypes for a user evaluation conducted in January and February this year. The vest was then tested by Soldiers at Fort Lewis, Wash.

AER still campaigning for donations

Madelyn Mercado

Financial Readiness/AER programs manager

2007 marks the 65th year of the Army Emergency Relief operation, and the fundraising campaign is well under way. So far, we have received $54,000 in contributions; however, since the beginning of the 2007 fiscal year, the Fort Jackson AER office has assisted 332 Soldiers with $334,909. Based on these numbers, more contributions are needed.

AER is a private, nonprofit organization dedicated solely to helping Soldiers and their military dependents, and because of this, a fundraising campaign is conducted every year.

The major campaign objectives are to increase awareness of AER for Soldiers and their dependents, to publicize procedures so all Army personnel know how to obtain AER assistance in times of need, to raise funds to support AER assistance programs and to inform Army personnel that their contributions "Help the Army Take Care of Its Own."

AER has been the Army's emergency financial assistance organization since Feb. 5, 1942. Since its inception, it has provided more than $940 million in direct assistance to more than 3 million Soldiers and their dependents.

Its primary mission is to provide emergency financial assistance to active and retired Soldiers and their dependents, Army National Guard and United States Army Reserve Soldiers on continuous active duty for more than 30 days (Title 10, USC) and their dependents and surviving spouses and orphans of Soldiers who died while on active duty or after they retired.

AER provides emergency financial assistance for food, utility bills (electric, water, gas, telephone), rent/mortgage, private vehicle repairs, medical/dental expenses, funeral expenses and personal needs when pay is delayed or stolen.

AER also provides undergraduate-level education scholarships, based primarily on financial need, to children and spouses of active and retired Soldiers.

All AER emergency financial assistance is issued in the form of an interest-free loan, a grant (an outright gift of funds) if repayment of the loan will cause undue financial hardship, or as a part loan and part grant.

AER receives funds from voluntary contributions from active and retired Soldiers (primarily donated during AER's annual fundraising campaign), repayment of interest-free loans, unsolicited contributions, and investment income. In 2006, Fort Jackson's annual campaign raised $233,587; however, we assisted 651 Soldiers and their families with $665,031.

AER belongs to all Soldiers — it is your organization. Your contribution remains important to allow AER to fulfill its mission of helping Soldiers in times of distress and misfortune. Contributions may be made by allotment (allowing you to spread your donation over time, up to 12 months), cash or check made payable to AER. This year's fundraising campaign ends May 15. To contribute, contact your unit representative or the AER Campaign headquarters at 751-4745/6939.

Patricia A. Guillory, Fort Jackson Army Community Service Mobilization and Deployment Program manager, conducts a meeting March 30 for the South Carolina Inter-Service Family Assistance Council. Council members, representing all service branches, came from South Carolina military installations and communities to provide assistance and guidance in family readiness during mobilization, deployment and disaster relief, with the intention of enhancing efforts rather than duplicating them.

Raising awareness of child abuse

Soldier and Family Readiness Program

April is Child Abuse Awareness Month and the Fort Jackson Soldier and Family Readiness Program is sponsoring awareness events and will distribute blue ribbons to help increase awareness of child abuse. Army Regulation 608-18 states if child abuse is suspected, one must report it. On Fort Jackson, child abuse should be reported to the Military Police.

"Child abuse is child maltreatment which places a child at risk or causes harm to the child," said T. Angela Pasley, Prevention and Education coordinator.

Caregivers, parents, strangers or other children are all potential abusers.

Child abuse is defined as physical, sexual and emotional abuse and neglect. Physical abuse is the most recognized abuse. Physical abuse is injury which results from punching, beating, shaking, biting or any intentional physical harm to a child. Emotional abuse is the most difficult to prove but the effects last a lifetime. Emotional abuse includes harsh attitudes such as threats, put downs and withhold love and support.

Many parents want to be good parents, but stressors such as finances, deployment and substance abuse, as well as a lack of coping, parenting and anger management skills, can cause parents to be aggressive or overreact to a child's misbehavior.

A report, when one is made, involves an investigation to ensure the child is safe and to assist parents in receiving the help they need to be good parents. As soon as abuse is suspected, file a report and allow the professionals to question the child.

Becoming an advocate for children is simple. Speak out about child protection issues, wear the blue ribbon in support of awareness, and if child abuse is suspected, report it.

"Child protection is a shared community responsibility. 'Victory Starts Here,' but prevention starts now," Pasley said.

Pet food products recalled, pulled

Kevin Robinson
Defense Commissary Agency

FORT LEE, Va. — Commissaries worldwide have been directed to remove from their shelves certain categories of Del Monte and Nestle Purina PetCare pet products listed in separate voluntary recalls.

In both instances, the recalls resulted from the discovery that the affected products contained melamine, a substance not approved for use in food.

The FDA had already announced the finding of melamine in pet food products related to the March 16 Menu Foods recall. In this instance, the FDA advised Del Monte and Nestle Purina that some of their products could also have been contaminated.

On March 30, Nestle Purina announced its recall of all sizes and varieties of its ALPO(r) Prime Cuts in Gravy wet dog food with specific date codes. The following ALPO products have been pulled from commissary shelves:

- Prime cuts — beef (24/13.2 ounces), beef and liver (24/13.2 ounces), chicken (24/13.2 ounces), turkey and bacon (24/13.2 ounces), gourmet dinner (24/13.2 ounces), beef, bacon and cheese (24/13.2 ounces), London grill (24/13.2 ounces), beef and gravy (12/22 ounces), beef and rice (24/13.2 ounces), lamb and rice (24/13.2 ounces), lamb and rice (12/22 ounces),

- Prime entree beef (24/13.2 ounces)

The recalled 13.2-ounce and 22-ounce ALPO Prime Cuts cans and 6-, 8-, 12- and 24-can ALPO Prime Cuts Variety Packs have four-digit code dates of 7037 through 7053, followed by the plant code 1159. Those codes follow a “Best Before Feb. 2009” date. This information should be checked on the bottom of the can or the top or side of the multi-pack cartons.

Purina’s 5.3-ounce Mighty Dog(r) pouch products, manufactured by Menu Foods, were previously withdrawn from the market as a precaution on March 16 as part of the Menu Foods recall.

At a time when most men his age would be considering retiring from the military, Dr. David McKee, an otolaryngologist (ear, nose and throat) at Moncrief Army Community Hospital, did the opposite.

At the age of 52 he joined the U.S. Army Reserve. After 16 years of private practice and four years of working as a civilian at MACH, McKee said he was looking for a new challenge.

“Now I can focus on just being a doctor — I don’t have to run an office, I don’t have to worry about hiring and firing,” he said.

When he made the decision to don the uniform, McKee said the reactions were mixed among his colleagues.

“Those who knew me from private practice questioned what I was doing,” he said. “They asked, ‘Why would a successful surgeon up and leave that environment and the financial advantages to come over where those advantages don’t exist and I could end up going to war?’”

McKee said the attitude of the staff at MACH was just the opposite. “People were impressed I would do such a thing to begin with,” he said. “No one thought I was crazy. Most people respected the decision.”

He knows that as a lieutenant colonel in the Army Reserve, it is very likely he will be deployed to Iraq or Afghanistan. McKee said that possibility did not deter him from joining, but rather was something he considered a positive.

“Right now they count heavily on Reserve Soldiers, especially those in the medical corps. It (deployment) would be a worthwhile endeavor. I’d like to be able to share my skills. I’m a little bit adventure-some, and would find it a challenge,” he said. “For me it’s a good choice and rounds out my life as a physician.”

McKee said he is exploring the possibility of attending airborne and air assault school. His adventure seeking isn’t limited to the military. He also plans to climb Mount Everest in the near future.

ACS offers support for new, veteran parents

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

Transitioning for Soldiers can take many different forms — permanent change of station moves, deploying and becoming a parent to name a few. Beginning a family isn’t a one time event, but rather a lifetime metamorphosis.

“Parenting is a constant transition,” said Eloise Fomby-Denson, New Family Support Program manager for Army Community Service. “You have to continually re-evaluate what you are doing, how it is working and what changes need to be made to your parenting style.”

To help Soldiers and their spouses be prepared for, and make, that transition, ACS has several support groups and classes at the ready. For the new and expecting parent, several groups meet on a monthly basis:

Baby Basics/Baby Bundle — Dad 101

The class meets the first Tuesday of each month. It covers such topics as bathing, feeding and handling infants. There is particular emphasis placed on Shaken Baby Syndrome. “We talk about, and show parents, how to calm a baby rather than shake them,” Fomby-Denson said. “Shaking an infant can cause deformities and even death. It’s child abuse.”

DoD has placed a special emphasis on educating service members about the dangers of SBS.

Mommy & Me Play Group and Kinder Gym

Mommy & Me meets every Monday and Kinder Gym meets the first and fourth Friday of each month. Fomby-Denson said the groups stress the importance of play for toddlers and the bond it helps create between parent and child.

“Playing together helps children develop trust in the parent,” she said.

Breastfeeding Support Group

The group is open to all expectant moms or nursing moms of infants and toddlers who are interested in breastfeeding. The group meets the third Tuesday of each month.

ACS also offers three classes for parents depending on the age of their children. The “Parents who Care” program focuses on effective parenting and offers tips on managing children from infants to teenagers.

Fomby-Denson said the groups focus on issues unique to each age group.

“For those with children under the age of 5, it is important for parents to remember a toddler’s job is to play,” she said. “This is when they are learning to explore. It’s your job as a parent to teach and model appropriate behavior.”

For adolescents, Fomby-Denson said the classes stress the importance of parents remembering that their children are learning how to be independent and their hormones are starting to play a factor in their behavior. She added that parents learn how to manage those changes without hollering and screaming.

When it comes to parenting teens, the classes center on the peer pressures teens face, as well as how to have a two-way discussion with them.

Classes for non-traditional families — single parent households and blended families are also available. Fomby-Denson said marrying someone who already has children can be very difficult, but like any other family unit, if you put work into the relationship everyone benefits.

“Many times the child doesn’t want to be disloyal to the non-custodial parent,” she said. “It’s important to teach your child that they haven’t lost a parent, they’ve gained a parent.”

To register for any of the classes, call 751-6325. ACS will come to individual units to teach the classes if there are three or more Soldiers interested in the class.

Funds vital for Reserve, Guard, deployed troops

Jim Garamone
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Army reserve-component training and equipment reset will be immediately affected if an emergency supplemental funding request isn't signed into law by April 15, Defense Department officials said here Tuesday.

Further, there will be serious repercussions for deployed service members if the supplemental funding isn't approved by May 15, the officials said.

Both the Senate and House bills have passed bills to provide the funding but contain amendments that call for combat troops to be out of Iraq on a certain timetable. President George W. Bush has vowed to veto any bill containing these provisions.

Close votes on the bills in each chamber indicate that neither the House nor the Senate would be able to override a presidential veto, DoD legislative affairs officials said.

The Senate is on recess through April 9, and the House is out through April 13. House and Senate negotiators must meet to reconcile the different portions of their respective bills.

With no supplemental funds, the Army will be forced to consider curtailing and suspending home-station training for Army Reserve and National Guard units, DoD officials said. The service would slow the training of units slated to deploy next to Iraq and Afghanistan and would cut funding for the upgrade or renovation of barracks and other facilities that support quality of life for troops and their families.

Leaders also would stop the repair of equipment necessary to support pre-deployment training, officials said.

If the supplemental funding is not passed by May 15, the Army would consider reducing depot repair work. The service would delay or curtail the deployment of brigade combat teams for training rotations. This may force the service to extend units in Iraq or Afghanistan, officials said.

No supplemental funding would also delay the formation of new brigade combat teams, force the service to implement a civilian hiring freeze and prohibit new contracts and service orders officials said.

Bush: delay in war funds will hurt military readiness, morale

Gerry J. Gilmore
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON, — Further congressional delay in forwarding an appropriate emergency war spending bill to the White House will damage military readiness and morale as well as endanger the nation, President Bush told reporters Tuesday at a White House news conference.

"Congress's failure to fund our troops on the front lines will mean that some of our military families could wait longer for their loved ones to return from the front lines, and others could see their loved ones headed back to the war sooner than they need to," Bush said.

That scenario is "unacceptable," Bush said, noting he believes the American people would agree with him.

"Members of Congress say they support the troops. Now they need to show that support in deed, as well as in word," Bush said. Congressional debate over the conduct of the war against terrorism "shouldn't come at the expense of funding our troops," the president said.

The Senate and the House of Representatives have both passed emergency war supplemental funding bills providing funding for U.S. troops, but the money is contingent on troops being withdrawn from Iraq according to a set timetable. Each chamber's bill also contains unrelated domestic spending.

The president sent his recommended military spending bill to Congress almost 60 days ago. Bush has rejected the recent Senate and House legislation out of hand, saying he'd veto any military funding bill with set timetables for the withdrawal of troops from Iraq.

Bush said he'd just received an update on the U.S. troop reinforcement, or surge, to Iraq from Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates and Marine Gen. Peter Pace, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Two of the five additional Army brigades involved in the surge are now operating in Baghdad, Bush noted, with another now making its way into Iraq from Kuwait.

"And the remaining two brigades will deploy in April and in May," the president said. It'll be early June, he said, before all five brigades and other U.S. reinforcements are in place in Iraq.

The U.S. Army brigades already in Baghdad are having a positive effect on reducing violence there, Bush said.

"And as more of those reinforcements arrive in the months ahead, their impact will continue to grow," the president said.

The current House and Senate war spending bills "undercut the troops by substituting the judgment of politicians in Washington for the judgment of our commanders in the ground, setting an arbitrary withdrawal from Iraq, and spending billions of dollars on 'pork barrel' projects completely unrelated to the war," Bush said.

If Congress fails to forward the White House a favorable war spending bill for presidential signature by mid-April, then, "the Army will be forced to consider cutting back on equipment, equipment repair, and quality of life initiatives for our Guard and Reserve forces," Bush said.

Bush said those cuts would become necessary, "because the money would have to be shifted to support the troops on the front lines." The Army also would have to consider cutting training for stateside-assigned Guard and Reserve units, he said.

That scenario would negatively affect unit readiness and might delay the affected units' availability for missions in Afghanistan and Iraq, Bush said.

Additionally, if Congress doesn't pass and forward a favorable war spending bill by mid-May, then potential problems would become more acute, the president said. The Army would be forced to consider slowing or freezing funding for its equipment-repair depots, Bush said, or delay training of some active-duty forces for overseas deployment.

"If this happens, some of the forces now deployed in Afghanistan and Iraq may need to be extended because other units are not ready to take their places," Bush explained. "The Army may also have to delay the formation of new brigade combat teams."

Bush then read from a letter to Congress written by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Peter J. Schoomaker, who informed legislators of the impending funding crisis for his service: "'Without approval of the supplemental funds in April, we will be forced to take increasingly draconian measures which will impact Army readiness and impose hardships on our soldiers and their families.'"

A shortage of funds, Bush explained, would cause some stateside-based Army units to be unavailable for mobilization to Iraq and Afghanistan to replace units set for rotation back to their home bases.

The president acknowledged that some Americans are concerned about U.S. policy on Iraq, but he emphasized that failure to defeat terrorism there would doom the fledgling Iraqi democracy and endanger U.S. citizens.

American military forces serving in Iraq are providing its young government "breathing room" so that it can eventually defend and sustain itself against its enemies, Bush said.

If U.S. troops leave Iraq too early, it could become a "caldron of chaos, which would embolden" the Sunni, Shiite and other extremists who are now trying to tear the country apart, Bush said. Terrorists could then use Iraq as a safe haven, he pointed out, from which to launch new attacks against America.

Bush said his primary presidential task is to protect the American people.

"And, I firmly believe that if we were to leave (Iraq) before the job is done, the enemy would follow us here," the president said.

Fort Jackson contest goes to the dogs

Theresa O'Hagan

Morale, Welfare and Recreation

Every dog has its day and at Fort Jackson, that day was Sunday. Thirty-one cuddly and talented canines accompanied nearly 80 dog lovers to the Youth Sports Complex for the 2nd Annual April Fool-ish Dog Show, which kicked off Month of the Military Child.

With so many categories and so many wonderful dogs, the judges had a hard job, indeed.

"Oh, this is going to be really hard," said Ed Perez, judge and dog aficionado when the cutest puppy category was called. "They are all cute."

Josh Edmond entered two American Bull Terriers, Chico and Tiny.

"This was our first time," Edmond said. "We got second place for cutest puppy."

Equally as hard was the least obedient category — all the dogs entered lived up to that reputation. The judges were told horror stories of urinating in the house, chewing everything, food stealing and strewing toilet paper throughout the entire home.

Judging most senior wasn't nearly as tough, with only one competitor, Petey, best friend of the Russell family, but what a good sport.

Best trick went to a Frisbee-catching Border collie.

Best wag went to a young boxer who wiggled his entire back end. Rocky, who was accompanied by Collin Binford, also took second for best owner and pet look-a-like.

"It was fun and friendly," Binford said. "My dog trained hard to prepare for the best wag. He has a really good wag."

The winner for best vocal performance was Jack, a beagle puppy who sported a fabulous pirate costume (Jack Sparrow, get it?) Jack was accompanied by Will Hopkins.

the judges. They gave their best puppy dog eyes, kisses, hugs and presented their bellies for rubbing. In the end it worked. No dog left empty handed, er, pawed. Every dog in the competition placed in at least one of the categories they showed in. Dogs were awarded treats, bowls and dog toys. Owners got bragging rights.

Even the children who could not have real dogs entered their favorite stuffed dogs in the following competitions: Least Obedient, Squeeziest, Most Inanimate, Biggest and Most Resembling a Real Dog.

The event culminated with a dog and owner parade, and then the winners were announced and prizes were awarded.

Ask the MEDDAC commander

Explaining HIPAA and information privacy

Col. James Mundy

Q What is HIPAA?

A HIPAA stands for the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996. HIPAA mandates new standards and procedures that promote standardization and efficiency in the health care industry.

Today's health care industry relies more and more on advances in technology to help administer health care. Doctors, hospitals, and health care vendors, such as billing services and software companies, use computers to conduct many of their health care transactions. Congress passed the HIPAA Law in response to the health care industry's increasing reliance on electronic transmission of health care data. The law will help streamline the administration of health care by requiring basic standards for conducting several transactions in electronic form, including processing claims and payments.

Q Is my spouse allowed to have access to my medical information?

A Yes, but only with your permission. You must give a written authorization to your Military Treatment Facility for your spouse to have access to your health records. The authorization will be dated and good for a period not to exceed one year.

Q Am I allowed to see my children's medical records?

A Yes. The Privacy Rule generally allows parents, as their minor children's "personal representative," to have access to information about the health and well being of their children when state or other underlying laws allow parents to make treatment decisions for their child.

This would also be true in the case of a guardian or other person responsible for a minor. The only exceptions when a parent is not a "personal representative" with respect to health information about a child are: (a) when state law or other law does not require consent of a parent before the minor can obtain a healthcare service, (b) when a court determines someone other than the parent to make treatment decisions or (c) when the parent agrees that the minor and the provider may have a confidential relationship.

Q What happens to my private information if I have to go to the emergency room?

A Health care organizations are permitted to use and disclose health information for any treatment purposes including emergencies.

Q Are my providers authorized to talk to other providers about my medical condition?

A MTFs may use and disclose protected health information for treatment, payment and health care operation purposes without getting beneficiary authorization. Protected health information is individually identifiable health information that is kept or sent in any form or medium (e.g. computer, e-mail attachments, file cabinet, software program, pictures, tape recorder, courier service, etc.) by a healthcare provider, health plan and employer.

Q Who can I contact if I have questions about HIPAA?

A If you have questions or concerns regarding HIPAA, call 751-2092.

If you would like to submit a question for Ask the MEDDAC or DENTAC commander, call 751-2338 or e-mail Pamela.English@se.amedd.army.mil.

Alcohol: a threat to teens' fun 'season'

Sandra Barnes

Army Substance Abuse Program

Spring is in the air. This is the time of the year that teenagers look forward to Spring Break, prom and graduation.

Unfortunately, some of that celebrating can involve underage drinking and the potential for tragedy. Teens and alcohol is a dangerous combination, especially this time of year. This is an excellent time to give parents some tips on how to keep teenagers safe.

Alcohol still is the drug of choice among youth. Unfortunately, it is in abundant supply despite rules and regulations prohibiting the sale of alcohol to minors.

Each year, approximately 5,000 people under the age of 21 die as a result of drinking alcohol; this includes about 1,900 deaths from motor vehicle crashes, 1,600 as a result of homicides, 300 from suicide, as well as hundreds from other injuries such as falls, burns and drowning.

Yet drinking continues to be widespread among adolescents. Research also shows that many adolescents start to drink at very young ages. In 2003, the average age of first use of alcohol was about 14, compared to about 17 in 1965. Other research shows that the younger children and adolescents are when they start to drink; the more likely they will be to engage in behaviors that harm themselves and others.

As children move from adolescence to young adulthood, they encounter dramatic physical, emotional and lifestyle changes. Developmental transitions, such as puberty and increasing independence, have been associated with alcohol. Just being an adolescent may be a key risk factor not only for starting to drink but also for drinking dangerously.

Whatever it is that leads adolescents to begin drinking, once they start they face a number of potential health risks. Although the severe health problems associated with harmful alcohol use are not as common in adolescents as they are in adult, studies show that young people who drink heavily may put themselves at risk for a range of potential health problems.

While drinking may be a singular problem behavior for some, research suggests that for others it may be an expression of general adolescent turmoil that includes other problem behaviors and that these behaviors are linked to unconventionality, impulsiveness, and sensation seeking.

Parents' drinking behavior and favorable attitudes about drinking have been positively associated with adolescents initiating and continuing drinking.

Children who were warned about alcohol by their parents and children who reported being closer to their parents were less likely to start drinking.

Lack of parental support, monitoring and communication has been significantly related to frequency of drinking, heavy drinking and drunkenness among adolescents. Harsh, inconsistent discipline and hostility or rejection toward children has also been found to significantly predict adolescent drinking and alcohol-related problems. Peer drinking and peer acceptance of drinking have also been associated with adolescent drinking.

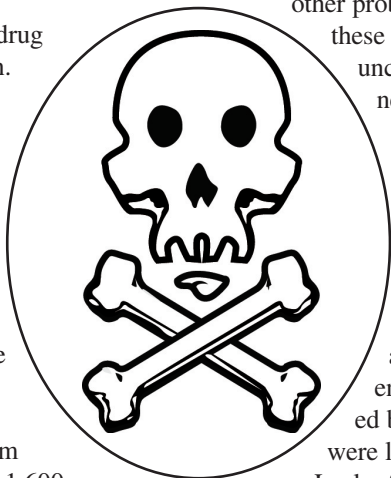

Alcohol is widely available and aggressively promoted in today's society. Alcohol use continues to be regarded, by many, as a normal part of growing up.

Yet underage drinking is dangerous, not only for the drinker but also for society, which is evident by the number of alcohol-involved vehicle crashes, homicides, suicides and other injuries. Adolescents also are at a greater risk for a variety of adverse consequences, including risky sexual activity and poor performance in school.

Here are some tips and ideas parents can use to ensure that this special time in their teenagers' lives is a safe experience:

- Talk with your teens. Be clear with them that underage drinking is illegal and unacceptable, and encourage them to participate in alcohol-free and drug-free parties and activities.
 - Get to know your children's friends and their parents.
 - If your teen is attending a party, know where your child will be. Call the parent in charge to verify the occasion and location, and to ensure there will be adult supervision. Make certain the host will not be serving or allowing alcohol.
 - Set a curfew for your teen, and indicate your expectation that if he/she leaves a party to go somewhere else, you will want to know.
 - Reinforce the message to your teenager that he/she should never allow someone who has been drinking or using drugs to drive him/her anywhere. Assure your child that he/she can telephone you to be picked up whenever needed.
 - If your teen is throwing a party, help your child with the planning. Invite only a specific number of people. Avoid an "open party" situation.
 - Set rules ahead of time for parties at your home, including no alcohol, drugs or tobacco.
 - Be home during the party. Make regular and unobtrusive visits to the party area with sensitivity to teens' need for privacy and independence.
 - An adult cannot serve alcohol to their teen's friends who are minors. It is illegal and dangerous. Furthermore, an adult cannot allow teens to bring alcohol to a party on their property.
 - Help create alcohol-free opportunities and fun activities in your home, so teens will feel welcome and safe.

How much do you know about alcohol?

The answers to last week's quiz are:

1. Alcohol is a mood-altering stimulant.

False. Alcohol is a mood-altering drug that depresses bodily functions.

2. Drinking coffee or taking a cold shower will sober you up.

False. Nothing but time will sober you up.

3. Whiskey taken straight will affect you more than whiskey diluted with water or other beverages.

True. Mixers slow the rate of absorption into the blood stream. Drinks mixed with water have a slower absorption rate than those mixed with carbonated beverages.

4. The effects alcohol has on the body vary according to the individual.

True. The effect alcohol has on you is dependent on gender, weight, how fast you metabolize alcohol, the situation, mood and presence of food in the stomach. If you are a woman, the effects also depend on the time of your menstrual cycle and if you are on the birth control pill.

5. The most serious consequence of consuming alcohol is a hangover in the morning.

False. The consumption of enough alcohol will cause death. This level is dependent on the individual.

6. An alcohol overdose can be fatal.

True. Blood alcohol levels exceeding .50 can and often do result in death. Approximately 1,000 people a year die in the United States from alcohol overdose or poisoning.

7. You can become addicted to alcohol.

True. You can become physically dependent on alcohol, which means that your body begins to require certain blood alcohol levels. If these levels are not maintained, you can experience physical withdrawal symptoms.

8. Women respond to alcohol differently than men do.

True. Women respond more quickly to alcohol due to their smaller body size and body fat distribution, a decreased amount of alcohol metabolizing enzyme and due to increased hormonal changes.

9. All alcoholic beverages are the same strength.

False. To find the percent of the alcohol, look on the label to find what the proof is, then divide that number by two (e.g., 100 proof equals 50 percent alcohol). The strength varies according to the type of alcohol and how it's made.

10. Alcohol is a food.

True. It is classified as both a food and a drug. It is considered a food because it contains calories.

Having a Happy and a Holy Easter

Chaplain (Capt.) Jonathan Fowler
1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment

Over the successive centuries much ink has been spilled and paper consumed concerning the topic of Easter.

It is no doubt customary for men of lesser abilities to rely upon the works of men who possess a particular genius. As I contemplate the composition of this article, I am reminded that I fall into the former camp rather than the latter. That is, I am a lesser light among men's dazzling capacities.

Therefore, I give you the words of that saintly church father Athanasius for your consideration, penned nearly 1,700 years ago regarding Easter and its festive nature:

"Come, my beloved, the season calls us to keep the feast. Again, the Sun of Righteousness, causing his divine beams to rise upon us, proclaims beforehand the time of the feast, in which, obeying him, we ought to celebrate it, lest when the time has passed by, gladness likewise may pass us by.

"For discerning the time is one of the duties most urgent on us, for the practice of virtue; so that the blessed Paul, when instructing his disciple, teaches him to observe the time, saying, 'Stand (ready) in season, and out of season' that knowing both the one and the other, he might do things befitting the season, and avoid the blame of unseasonableness. For this the God of all, after the manner of wise Solomon, distributes everything in time and season, to the end that, in due time, the salvation of men should be everywhere spread abroad."

Athanasius also wrote, "Hear again the same (Apostle) blowing the trumpet, and proclaiming, 'Christ our Passover is sacrificed; therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness.' If thou wouldest listen to a trumpet much greater than all these, hear our Saviour saying; 'In that last and great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink.'

"For it became the Saviour not simply to call us to a feast, but to 'the great feast;' if only we will be prepared to hear, and to conform to proclamation of every trumpet."

To some the words of Athanasius may seem somewhat archaic to this 21st century setting.

However, to those of us who take Easter seriously, it is refreshing to hear of Christ and his crucifixion and resurrection rather than Easter outfits, egg hunts, bunny rabbits and other commercial trappings that have crept in and since stolen the sacredness of this holy day. Let us who are called by that sacred name, Christian, reaffirm our resolve to maintain the integrity of celebrating Christ's resurrection.

In some respects, we may be merely a generation away from having this hallowed season completely hijacked by the economically driven gurus and commercial practitioners of our culture.

May this Easter be one in which God's holy Son, Christ the Lord, lives and reigns in your home, which would make it not only a happy Easter, but a holy one.

Cases of the Week

The Military Police assisted deputies from the Richland County Sheriff's Department in serving an arrest warrant to a Soldier on the installation.

The Soldier was arrested on an outstanding, out-of-state warrant for Burglary, Grand Larceny and Desertion. After the arrest, the Soldier was transported to the Richland County Detention Center pending a court hearing and possible extradition.

A Soldier removed a blouse from a display rack and exited the Fort Jackson Post Exchange without rendering proper payment. The Soldier was charged with Shoplifting and released to her unit. The cost of the recovered item was $12.

A Soldier notified the Provost Marshal Office 911 dispatcher of a domestic violence occurring at her residence.

The victim reported that she and her spouse were involved in a verbal altercation that turned physical when he pushed her and later fled the scene. The suspect was later stopped and detained by the Military Police, then charged with Criminal Domestic Violence.

A Soldier reported that while leaving a room, another Soldier made a verbal comment and pushed him. In retaliation, the first Soldier pushed the other Soldier down a flight of stairs, and then proceeded to punch him in the head.

The Soldier who was pushed down the stairs received several bruises and lacerations; they both were charged with Assault and released to their units.

Provost Marshal Tip of the Week

Recently an increased number of personnel have been seen running in high traffic areas along Marion Street, Hampton Parkway and Golden Arrow Road. These areas can be dangerous for runners and caution should be used when conducting individual or unit physical training. It is important that when running in these areas personnel should wear reflective vests and carry a flasher as approaching vehicles may not recognize runners until it is too late.

PCSing: Legal tips for a ‘smooth move’

Capt. Chris Roten

Legal Assistance Attorney

With the permanent change of station season fast approaching, Soldiers should consider certain legal issues.

Are you going to lease a house/apartment at your next duty station? What about buying or selling a house? Can you deduct moving expenses from your income taxes? What about changing your driver’s license or car registration? Are spouses eligible for unemployment compensation if he or she leaves a job because of a military reassignment?

Following are some frequently encountered legal situations, how they can affect you and what you can do:

Military termination clause for leases

Before signing a lease at the new duty station, check the lease for a military “termination” clause suitable for the military community in case you need to end the lease before the full term. Among other things to review:

- Does it anticipate PCS situations?
- Does it incorporate any state law provision?
- How do military community members find out about it? Is it part of the welcome packet?

Check with the local housing or legal assistance office before signing a lease and have a trained professional review the lease to ensure you are covered.

Buying a home

These Web sites might have useful information:

- <http://homebuying.about.com/realestate/homebuying/library/blbuykit.htm> — Great resources for someone considering buying a home. Links to calculators to help decide how much you can afford.
- <http://kiplinger.com/tools/housing.html> — for those wondering how much you may/can/should spend on a house, Kiplinger offers help. Before you can know how big a mortgage payment you can afford, you need to tally up other monthly expenses. The first part of this calculator will help you do just that. Part two will help you estimate future costs, or savings, associated with the home you are considering.

- <http://www.ricedelman.com/planning/home> — offers a quiz on whether you are ready to buy.
- <http://www.hsh.com/calc-incomequal.html> — offers a calculator for how much a lender might let you borrow (Use it as a benchmark, because property tax and home insurance vary from loan to loan and state to state.).
- <http://www.hsh.com/calc-howmuch.html> — offers a calculator for how much house you can afford.

Tax planning and moving expenses

You can deduct the reasonable unreimbursed expenses incurred for:

- a. Moving household goods and personal effects, including expenses for hauling a trailer, packing, crating, in-transit storage and insurance.
- b. Travel and lodging expenses from the old home to the new home, including automobile expenses and airfare.

No deductions are available for any expenses for meals, the cost of unnecessary side trips, or lavish and extravagant lodging. Only unreimbursed expenses incurred in actually moving from the former home to the new assignment are deductible. The expense of pre-move house-hunting trips are not deductible, nor is there a deduction for any expenses for moving services provided by the government, or that were reimbursed and not included in income. For more information visit the IRS Web site at www.irs.gov

Driver Licensing/Vehicle Registration

Check the Department of Motor Vehicles in the new state to find out what you need to do for vehicle registration and drivers license. Some states allow you to keep renewing your vehicle registration while away from the state on military orders while others require you to register a vehicle in the state you live. Some states have property tax on vehicles and some will waive the taxes if you are in the state on military orders. To find out more about each state’s rules try:

www.usps.com/moversnet/motor.html.

Legal Assistance Office

Fort Jackson’s Legal Assistance Office is located at 4555 Scales Ave. temporarily while construction occurs at the 9475 Kershaw Rd. location. Construction is expected to last for several months, and the office will be open during regular duty hours, which are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Auto Lease

More and more people are leasing cars. Several Internet resources are available to help you decide if this is a good idea.

Military personnel who lease a car should consider whether they will deploy or PCS during the lease period and plan for that contingency. Check the lease terms to see what happens if you move out of state or out of the country.

Consider these items while planning your move either to or from Fort Jackson. If you have any questions about a contract and/or lease agreement, have it reviewed by a legal assistance attorney before signing.

If you are moving from Fort Jackson, contact the Legal Assistance Office where you will be stationed for state and post-specific information. To set up an appointment with an attorney call 751-4287.

Lifters handle ‘heavy metal’ competition

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

Competitors from across post participated Saturday in the annual Fort Jackson Bench Press Competition at the MG Robert B. Solomon Center.

Lifters were divided into several classifications, including male, female, recreation and active duty, and also competed in weight classes ranging from 123 pounds to the heavyweights at 242 pounds.

One competitor, Sgt. 1st Class Jeff Marciano of the 171st Infantry Brigade, said he didn't train particularly for this event, though he has lifted weights "on and off" for 10 years. Competing in the active duty, 242-pound class, his lift of 305 pounds was good enough for first place, though it wasn't his all-time best.

"I've lifted more," Marciano said. "I was up to 405 when I was deployed to Iraq."

Not everyone who competed in the event was your traditional power lifting enthusiast. Sgt. 1st Class Steven Hall of 3rd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment has lifted weights for about 12 years, but mainly as a means of staying in shape for basketball and football. The 35-year-old said he and two other Soldiers entered the competition after being asked to by his sergeant major. Weighing in at 179 pounds, Hall pressed 275 and easily won his division.

1st Lt. Elfonzo Reed, commander, Company E, 3rd Bn., 13th Inf. Reg., is a 145-pound self-described basketball player and runner. He said he trained for the bench press competition alongside Hall in a makeshift gym in the back of their office. He said they only had a few days notice, so they concentrated on a limited number of exercises.

Hall said he didn't do as well as he felt he could've in the competition, but still managed to win his weight class with a lift of 205 pounds. The main thing, he said, was that he had a great time participating.

"I've seen a couple of competitions before and I thought this was set up nicely," he said. "I'd like to see more participants — I think everyone there enjoyed it."

That's Them wins fifth consecutive title

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

And the domination continues.

That's Them wrapped up its fifth consecutive championship Tuesday at Coleman Gym, storming out of the loser's bracket and beating top-seeded NiteFlyte 51-44 for the post winter Recreational League basketball championship.

In other championship action 120th beat out SSI, 47-43 to capture the Active Duty League crown.

As is typical anytime That's Them and NiteFlyte meet, the game was physical from the opening tip. Bodies flew, tempers flared and fouls were called — including a double technical in the second half — but in the end, That's Them repeated as champs because it executed its game plan better.

"We just tried to avoid making the mistakes we made in the first round and just play good team ball," said That's Them player/coach Eric McNealy. "We've played with our backs against the wall before so we knew after that first loss, if we lose again, it's over. This is playoff time and you've got to give everything you've got."

The first-round mistakes McNealy referred to culminated in a lopsided 58-45 loss to NiteFlyte, putting his team on the brink of elimination. After beating the South Carolina National Guard squad in the second round, That's Them topped NiteFlyte Monday, 59-54, to set up Tuesday's showdown.

NiteFlyte led 6-4 early in the game, but after That's Them got up 7-6 on a free throw, they never trailed again.

Kenny Fields carried much of the load for his team, scoring its first 10 points and finishing with 22. He was a constant presence under the basket, whether scoring or rebounding, but it just wasn't enough.

Before the playoffs began, McNealy said he wanted to play NiteFlyte for the championship, not because he wanted an easy path to the championship, but because after splitting two regular-season games, he wanted to know who the better team was.

Now we know.

120th wins Active Duty League championship, 47-43

All of a sudden, maybe the loser's bracket isn't so scary, after all.

After losing its first-round game against Military Construction, Army National Guard, the 120th Adjutant General Battalion basketball squad rebounded to beat the Soldier Support Institute and the 2nd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment, forcing a Tuesday-night winner-take-all championship game with 2-13.

The 120th took full advantage of its situation, beating 2-13 for the second consecutive night, 47-43, and claiming the post active duty championship.

The game started off sloppy and offense was sparse for both squads. But after leading just 16-15 at halftime, the 120th came out firing in the second half. Coach Varnell Ward said it didn't take any motivational speeches to get his players' minds in the game.

"We've been a second-half team all year," he said. "I didn't have to tell them anything; they knew what they had to do. When we came out in the second, our guys got out of slow motion, put it in fifth gear and executed — that's why we're where we are now."

The 120th's sudden burst of offense is largely due to the awakening of Jermaine Edmunds, who buried several key shots late in the game with the outcome still in question. His 16 second-half points — including four 3-pointers — kept 2-13 at bay, even when the infantrymen's own shooters got hot.

2-13th's Bronson Burns attempts to get past the 120th's Kevin Bland on Tuesday in the post Active Duty League championship game Tuesday at Coleman Gym. The 120th won 47-43.

That's Them team members come together before the post Recreational League championship game against NiteFlyte on Tuesday at Coleman Gym. That's Them won the game, 51-44, and the post championship.
